

“Transition is inherently a process that emerges in situ. It is born as a result of exposure, talks and what are more often than not messy negotiations. The outcome is almost inevitably a hybrid of mechanisms of justice, politics and coexistence that emerge from interim and experimental initiatives designed to promote nation-building.” (Charles Villa-Vicencio)